

Pimento / Presentation

Paris - June - 2026

A true story

“A long time ago, I’ve decided to stop drinking alcohol.

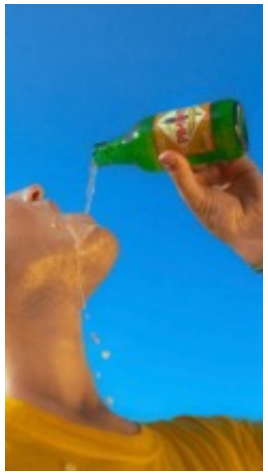

Doing this, all soft-drinks I could find were all boring and tasteless, the reason why I’ve decided to invent a beverage myself that could burn my mouth and my throat both.

The perfect trio of ginger, tonic and chilli pepper came to me one night. I couldn’t believe my taste buds - my glass was filled with an amazing drink which was both sweet and tough at the same time. Soft like a soda, strong like a spirit.

Then I decided later to produce that incredible discovery on a wider scale, first to help people slow down on alcohol.

Also to help them making great cocktails.”

Eric Dalsace

Take a sip

First, the surprise of ginger - full and fruity.

Then, 2 seconds after exactly, the kick of chilli - hot and amazing.

The unique taste and sensation of Pimento.

And if you squeeze a slice of lime in the glass, it will be even better.

Origin & supply chain

- Natural flavours are produced by Expressions Aromatiques (Grasse, France)
- Bottling at La Brasserie La Licorne Karlsbräu/Karlsberg Group (Saverne, Alsace, France)
- Warehouse & logistics: Joker Log (30km South from Paris, France 91)

Pimento & ginger beers

(part 1)

- For Anglo-Saxons, Pimento is a spicy ginger beer. Many of them are nostalgic for the traditional very strong & highly spicy products originating in India. That's why they enjoy Pimento so much.

- However, most people don't know what a ginger beer is. They generally think it's a real beer that also contains ginger flavours. And even if they know what a ginger beer is, it's so far from the nature of Pimento that it's better to use the "spicy ginger drink" wording.

Pimento & ginger beers

(part 2)

- Classic ginger beers are thin in terms of taste, and very often extremely bitter - they are really just designed as mixers for a limited range of spirits rather than refreshing soft drinks.
- On his own side, Pimento is really appreciated neat, “on-the-rocks”.
- It’s probably the strongest drink in the world - with a distinctive, spicy kick!

Pimento & ginger beers

(part 3)

- It's also true that bartenders prefer Pimento because its chilli pepper really enhances and boosts flavours of spirits.
- Its tasting notes also make it the most versatile mixer ever - that can be mixed with all spirits because the drink is actually very fruity.
- In a cocktail, the spirit slightly softens the kick of Pimento - the drink will still remain hot and "caliente" - but will be a little bit gentler on the palate.

Tasting notes

(part 1)

- Pimento is a non-alcoholic refreshing fizzy drink produced with ginger, tonic and hot pepper natural flavours .
- The drink contains also small amounts of bitter orange, lime, oregano and gentian natural flavours.
- The chilli pepper comes from Jamaica, the ginger from China and Ivory Coast.

Tasting notes

(part 2)

- The tonic flavour is not made with quinine, but from an infusion of quassia.

- Pimento contains 30% less sugar than classic sodas. The recipe includes 2 sweeteners: Acesulfame K + Sucralose to soften the drink's natural strong and bitter notes without adding too many calories.

- Acesulfame K + Sucralose are among the best sweeteners for beverages and they are totally safe. European law requires the use of 2 sweeteners - in combination they produce a greater sweetening effect. It's unfortunately not possible to use the new sweetener, Stevia as this imparts a strong anise seed taste.

Pimento is healthy

- Natural flavours
- Zero artificial preservatives, gluten free, it also does not contain allergens
- Ginger is one of the best vitality booster
- Chilli Pepper is also extremely healthy, protecting heart
- Lower in sugar - up to 30% lower than most ginger beers & soft drinks

How is appreciated Pimento? (part 1)

- It's a real and daring experience. It produces an amazing kick, it tastes like alcohol but it's not!
  - Pimento is perfect for people who don't drink alcohol or who think that classic sodas lack any real flavour.
  - Pimento is a gorgeous soft drink but also one of the best mixer there is. Obviously, bartenders prefer Pimento because its chilli pepper really boosts mocktails and cocktails.
- On this double market segment, Pimento is definitely the only one

How is appreciated Pimento? (part 2)

- Mixed in amazing cocktails, the drink is arguably the most versatile mixer there is for a wide range of spirits - such as vodka, rum, gin, tequila, Mezcal, brandy, whisky, bourbon, Calvados, Jägermeister, Chartreuse, Cachaça, beer, absinthe, sake, Cognac, Armagnac, Prosecco and Champagne also!

- Note that the Pimento bottle has a handy twist-off screw-cap which allows bartenders and consumers to reseal it and return the bottle to the fridge for further use.

Which targets?

- Adults who see in Pimento a real alternative to alcohol. Much better than a classic and “regressive” soda.
- Younger people who like nasty sensations in their cocktails (& shooters).
- Ethnic Groups who are looking for strong and non-alcoholic sensations. Ginger and chilli pepper are daily part of their culinary habits (Muslims, Africans, Indians, Asians, South-Americans…).
- In many restaurants, Pimento is a ready, natural accompaniment for many of the world’s foods - perfect with South-American, Asian, Scandinavian, Mexican, Indian, Anglo-Saxon, African, Spanish or Middle-Eastern cuisines.

How is mainly served Pimento?

1. Neat on ice + lime
2. Mixed with a fruit juice: cloudy apple or pineapple or strawberry… (1/3 Pimento, 2/3 juice)
3. Hot Mule (+ vodka & lime), inspired by Moscow Mule
4. Spicy & Stormy (+ dark rum & lime), inspired by Dark 'N' Stormy
5. Ginger & Gin (+ lime & mint)… also called Italian Mule in Italy
6. (Virgin) Pimento Mojito (to replace sparkling water)

- We have almost 100 recipes of Pimento cocktails & mocktails created by European bartenders. Check out www.pimentodrink.com

Pimento Spicy ginger

VS

Classic Ginger beers

- A refreshing soft drink
- A real kick provided by the chilli pepper
- A mixer that boosts flavours
- A very versatile mixer
- A unique flavour (SKU)

- Definitely not
- Ginger (only) containing a small amount of pepper
- Ginger slightly enhance flavours
- Only for a limited range of spirits
- Large identical ranges

Pimento vs ranges

We don’t have to be afraid if bars love ordering mixers ranges.

Pimento has no real competitor and can be added to a range.

It’s a unique drink, with its own skills.

- Double Dutch, Fever Tree, 3 Cents, Fentimans, Thomas Henry, we are watching a battle of identical ranges (me-too products) and there's no doubt that a financial leverage is important for bars in terms of negotiations.
- However, we can fly over these fights (and actually the more there are, the more we enjoy), because we have a proper competitiveness, precisely being a disruptive, specific, and distinctive player, far from debates.

It’s clear that Pimento’s development goes through an International distribution that currently surfs on the powerful wave of ginger drinks.

And Pimento is certainly the most powerful actor (the only real spicy ginger - that contains a significant amount of chilli pepper) in the world.

Markets

- Europe
  France / UK / Denmark / Norway / Netherlands / Belgium / Hungary / Czech Republic / Switzerland / Italy / Croatia / Serbia / Bosnia-Herzegovina / Albania / Greece / Cyprus

- Grand Export
  Chile / Guadeloupe / Ivory Coast / Senegal / South Africa / Benin / Togo / Tahiti / Réunion island

- Importers are either big players or more flexible & dedicated structures

Pimento distribution

- We export Pimento in 25 countries and this development never stops to grow.
- We work with 1 importer per country only.
- Ranking (sales): 1 Netherlands. 2 France. 3 Belgium. 4 UK.
- There’s 2 types of countries / markets:

Strategy (part 1)

1.- Countries where ginger and chilli are both not really known and consumed and/or markets where ginger drinks (ginger beers and ginger ale) are not famous.

a) In this case, we focus on on-trade (Horeca) first - bars, restaurants, clubs but also wholesalers, B2B Cash & Carry, liquor stores, fine and urban groceries + concept stores.

b) When visiting a bar and focusing on Pimento as a new premium soft drink, there's a high possibility that the manager says he needs nothing else that he already has - even if his range is actually limited.

c) But if Pimento is presented as a powerful soft drink AND the best mixer ever, then it's possible to wake up the interest of the bar manager. Pimento is generally purchased as a mixer, but served as a real soft after a while.

d) When we got a good level of awareness and buzz through bars, we can develop an off-trade approach once we are 100% sure that we have generated a minimum amount of demand - because we won't have a 2nd chance.

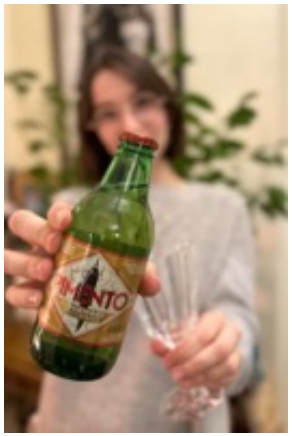

Strategy (part 2)

2.- Countries where ginger and chilli are part of culinary habits and/or markets where ginger drinks category is famous.

a) In that case, we work on off/on trade (retail & Horeca) both at the same time and even try to focus much more on the soft drink (soda) dimension of the drink, knowing that the front label makes easy the understanding of the product's taste… and benefits. It also happens that we only focus on off-trade networks.

b) As in the 1st case, we do have a real educational approach with bartenders and provide them a lot of information to prove the competitiveness of the brand when used in mixology.

- Since the Pimento recipe is as unique as original, tastings generally make the difference. With Pimento, never forget that most of the time, tasting = loving = purchasing

Global distribution system

◆ On-trade

(Horeca) In this case, Pimento is mainly presented as the best and versatile MIXER of the market

These positions

are not exclusive of each other

◆ Off-trade

(Retail) In this case, Pimento is mainly proposed as the strongest and premium SOFT DRINK of the market

About retail

- We focus on the soft-drink aspect of the beverage, leaving the horeca to serve one of the best mixers available.
- On the shelf, it’s therefore better to be located near ginger drinks and alternative sodas rather than near spirits.
- In fact, Pimento presents itself as the "Tabasco" of sodas. Our goal is to improve service levels in order to minimize stock shortages as much as possible.

Cross-brandings

(for cocktail bars only)

- It's a fact that a Perfect Serve is a good solution for everybody (producer /distributor / bartender / consumer).
- But to be efficient and successful, a Perfect Serve has to be great, credible and specific.
- It means that it has to bring something new and innovative to the market.

Some examples of perfect serves with spirits and non-alcoholic ones

Pimento conditioning

6x4x25cl
Mainly for the retail
(off-trade)

2x10x25cl
Mainly for the horeca on-trade)

Pimento labels

Front label

Back label

Possibility to stick a specific back label – during the production only. On request

Eric Dalsace
CEO / Pimento
Cell: +33 6 19 99 24 82
e.dalsace@pimentodrink.com

www.pimentodrink.com

